1. What is the difference between a polling district, a polling place and a polling station?

A polling district is a geographical sub-division of an electoral area, i.e. a UK Parliamentary constituency, a European Parliamentary electoral region, a ward or an electoral division.

A polling place is a geographical area in which a polling station is located. However, as there is no legal definition of what a polling place is the geographical area could be defined as tightly as a particular building or as widely as the entire polling district.

A polling station is the actual area where the process of voting takes place, and must be located within the polling place designated for the particular polling district.

2. Polling districts

2.1 Who is responsible for designating polling districts?

Every relevant authority in the UK is responsible for dividing its area into polling districts for UK Parliamentary elections for so much of any constituency as is situated in its area (1), and for keeping the polling districts under review.

For European Parliamentary elections, the same polling districts as designated for UK Parliamentary elections are to be used unless the relevant authority considers that there are special circumstances that make alternative designations appropriate (2).

For local government elections, a local authority may divide its designated electoral areas (i.e. wards or electoral divisions) into polling districts (3) Although there is no requirement to sub-divide local government electoral areas into polling districts, it is recognised good practice to do so. When doing so, every effort must be made to ensure that the polling district scheme for local government elections mirrors as closely as possible that agreed for parliamentary elections (4).

2.2 What is the definition of a relevant authority?

a) In England, the council of a district or London borough;
b) In Scotland, a local authority; and
c) In Wales, the council of a county or county borough (5)

2.3 What are the rules?

When designating polling districts, relevant authorities must seek to ensure that all the electors in the constituency have such reasonable facilities for voting as are practicable in the circumstances. In addition, and unless there are special circumstances that lead the authority to determine otherwise, each parish in England and each community in Wales must be in a separate polling district.

Similarly in Scotland, each electoral ward must be divided into two or more separate polling districts.
2.4 What is the Electoral Registration Officer’s responsibility?

Where a relevant authority makes any alterations to the polling districts within its area, the Electoral Registration Officer must amend his or her register of electors accordingly. The changes to the register take effect on the date that the Electoral Registration Officer publishes a notice stating that the adaptations have been made (6).

However, there may be instances where alterations must be made at other times of the year. In such cases, the Electoral Registration Officer will need to publish a notice fourteen calendar days before the publication of the revised version of the register in a local newspaper, at his or her office and at some other conspicuous place or places in the area (7).

3. Polling places

3.1 Who is responsible for designating polling places?

Every relevant authority in the UK must designate a polling place for every polling district in the parliamentary constituency (8) unless the size or other circumstances of the polling district are such that the situation of the polling places do not materially affect the convenience of the electorate.

A polling place can either be an area or a building and in some authorities designate entire polling districts as polling places so that it is easier for polling stations to be altered in the event of a building becoming unavailable.

This is the current situation in Chorley.

The relevant authority must also keep the polling places under review.

3.2 What are the rules?

Relevant authorities must:

a) seek to ensure that all the electors in the constituency have such reasonable facilities for voting as are practicable in the circumstances;

b) seek to ensure that so far as is reasonable and practicable, the polling places they are responsible for are accessible to all electors, including those who are disabled, and when considering the designation of a polling place, must have regard to the accessibility needs of disabled persons (9).

In addition, the polling place for a polling district must be within the area of the district unless special circumstances make it desirable to designate an area either wholly or partly outside of the polling district. The polling place must also be small enough to indicate to electors in different parts of the polling district how they will be able to reach their designated polling station.

Should a relevant authority fail to designate a polling place, the entire polling district will be classed as the polling place for that district.

4. Polling stations

4.1 Who is responsible for designating polling stations?
The Returning Officer for the particular election must provide a sufficient number of polling stations, and allot the electors to those polling stations in such manner as he or she thinks the most convenient.

4.2 What are the rules?

The polling stations must be located within the polling places designated by the relevant authority. In a UK Parliamentary constituency in Scotland that comprises the whole or any part of more than one local government area, there must be at least one polling station in each of those local government areas.

The election rules permit the Returning Officer to provide one or more polling stations within the same room, and must supply each with a sufficient number of voting compartments.

5. Review of polling districts and polling places

5.1 General background

Section 16 of the Electoral Administration Act 2006 introduced a number of changes to the Representation of the People Act 1983 in respect of the way in which reviews of polling districts and polling places must be undertaken.

In addition the Electoral Registration and Administration Act 2013 introduced a change to the timing of compulsory reviews of UK Parliamentary polling districts and polling places. The next compulsory reviews must now be started and completed between 1 October 2013 and 31 January 2015 (inclusive).

5.2 This review

This review must be completed by 31 January 2015

5.3 Subsequent reviews

Subsequent compulsory reviews must be started and completed within the period of 16 months that starts on 1 October of every fifth year after 1 October 2013.

It is important to note that if it wishes to do so, the relevant authority may undertake reviews of all or some of the designated polling districts and polling places at any time (14), but must undertake a review of each within four years of the previous review.

For administrative convenience, it would seem sensible to review all polling districts and polling places on a regular four-yearly cycle, regardless of whether or not a particular polling district or polling place has been reviewed for some reason (e.g. because of an influx of electors in an area or the non availability of a building designated as a polling place) in the intervening period. This will help in ensuring that a consistent approach is taken across the relevant authority’s area.

5.4 The review process

Schedule A1 to the Representation of the People Act 1983 sets out the steps relevant authorities must follow in undertaking any review of polling districts and/or polling places. Prior to commencing the review, the electoral administrator will need to compile a great deal of the background information necessary for informed decisions to be made by Councillors. Most of the information will be readily to hand, and will include:

- electorate figures, broken down to street level;
- details of existing polling places, and an indication as to their overall suitability for the purpose;
- details of potential alternative polling places, and details of other locations that might appear suitable on the face of it, but for specific reasons are not;
- detailed and up to date maps of a scale that will assist in the designation of polling district boundaries; and where significant development is proposed in an area,
- a projection of the likely influx of electors.

This list is clearly not exhaustive, but gives some indication as to the information required to undertake a full and proper review.

5.5 Notice of the holding of a review

The relevant authority is required to publish notice of the holding of a review (15).

Schedule A1 does not specify in what manner the relevant authority is required to publish this notice, but it would seem reasonable to follow the principles set out in the Review of Polling Districts and Polling Places (Parliamentary Elections) Regulations 2006 for the publication of a Returning Officer’s representations.

6. The role of the Returning Officer

The relevant authority is required to consult the Returning Officer for every parliamentary election held in a constituency that is wholly or partly within its area.

The Returning Officer is required to make representations to the relevant authority, which must include information as to the location of polling stations (both existing and proposed) within polling places (both existing and proposed) (16).

Within thirty calendar days of their receipt, the relevant authority is required to publish the Returning Officer’s representations as a minimum:

- at the relevant authority’s office;
- at least one other conspicuous place in the area; and
- on the relevant authority’s website (17)

7. Other representations

In reviewing polling places, the relevant authority is required to actively seek representations from such persons as it thinks have particular expertise in relation to:

- access to premises; or
- facilities for persons who have different forms of disability (18)

Such persons must be given the opportunity to make representations and to comment on the representations made by the Returning Officer.

A key factor the relevant authority will have to consider at the outset of the review is the identification of those persons it feels has particular expertise in accessibility issues. In many cases however, local authorities will have already built good working relationships with disability awareness groups, and logic would suggest that any tried and trusted mechanism for consultation with such groups be utilised.

In addition, any elector in a constituency may make representations on the designation of polling places to the relevant authority (19). Although not specifically provided for in the review rules, it would seem sensible to actively encourage representations from local constituency political parties and independent candidates. By doing so, the relevant authority will be giving key stakeholders in the electoral process the opportunity to participate.

Further sources of expertise from which representations might be sought include the relevant authority’s own planning and property services departments. Each will be able to provide technical guidance on the availability and suitability of locations or premises, and details of residential developments that might have future implications on electoral arrangements.

Administrators may wish to model possible arrangements by utilising mapping and planning tools available within the authority. Local authorities now have access to GIS mapping services, many of which combine data from different services that may be of use in testing the suitability of a proposed scheme.

Close liaison with other council departments will take a lot of the legwork out of the process.

In addition, the relevant authority might wish to obtain up to date mapping information from the Ordnance Survey prior to formally considering the suitability of any representations received.

An extremely practical way of undertaking the review is to consider the suitability of the available polling places first, i.e. to identify what premises are available, and then to designate the polling district boundaries and allocate the electors to what is actually available. Although the rules are drafted to require the relevant authority to sub-divide its area into polling districts and to then consult on the allocation of the associated polling places, there seems little sense in designating polling districts that are devoid of suitable polling places.

It is important to note that representations made by any person in connection with the review of polling places may include proposals for alternative polling places, which must then be considered by the relevant authority.

8. Evaluating the suitability of potential polling places

Regardless of the expert advice the relevant authority is required to seek, it is important that the accessibility needs of all voters are considered when designating polling places. There are a number of steps that can be taken to facilitate this process (20):

Consider the location of the polling place:

- is it located close to where most of the electors in the polling district live?
- is it at the top or bottom of a steep hill?
- does it have suitable access from a road?
- if there is a pavement, does it have a dropped kerb close by?
- are there any convenient public transport links?
- availability of parking:
- are there adequate parking facilities close to the entrance of the building?
if not, is there anywhere close by that could be used for parking just on polling day?
how far do electors have to walk from the car park to the polling station?
is there a designated disabled parking space, or could one be provided?
is there a dropped kerb from the parking area to the polling station?

All approaches should:

have a hard, smooth, non slip surface, without steps, potholes, broken slabs, etc. – graveled surfaces can present difficulties to wheelchair and buggy users;
not have any severe gradients; and be well lit.

Entrance:

does the building have a level entrance?
are there any steps to the entrance of the building?
are the stairs highlighted in any way?
is there a handrail by the steps?
is a permanent ramp provided?
if not, could a temporary ramp with a suitable gradient be provided safely, or is there another entrance which people with disabilities or other electors could use?
is the door wide enough for a wheelchair user to gain access?
how heavy are the doors for a frail or elderly person to open? Would they need to be propped open?

Inside the building:

are there any internal steps or barriers for electors to negotiate?
are the door mats level with the floor? If not, can they be removed?
are there any other trip hazards?
is there a suitable non-slip floor covering? Would it become slippery when wet?
are there any corridors which may be difficult to negotiate for any electors using wheelchairs or those who find walking difficult?
in terms of the layout of polling equipment in the room to be used as a polling station, is there enough space in the room for staff, polling equipment and a number of electors, including a wheelchair user?
is there adequate lighting in the room? Switch on all the lights available to test this;
is there any need for additional lighting?
movable mats, heavy curtains trailing on the floor, a mix of carpet and wooden flooring with edging lips in between, and highly polished floors can all be potential hazards.

If the premises has any of these features, can anything be done to remove or improve them?

Another key factor to consider when assessing the suitability of a particular building or location is the facilities available to polling station staff. It must not be overlooked that the staff will be on duty for approximately sixteen hours, and that they will not be permitted to leave the premises. Their basic human needs must not be discounted.

Issues to consider include the provision of:

  adequate toilet facilities;
- a kitchen, or at a minimum, access to tea and coffee making facilities;
- adequate heating/cooling;
- a separate area adjacent to the polling station where breaks could potentially be taken;
- a telephone;
- comfortable adult chairs.

9. Administration of the review

It is important to note that the relevant authority is responsible for dividing its area into polling districts, so a decision will need to be taken before the review commences as to how the authority wishes to consider the representations made, and ultimately designate the polling districts and polling places within its area.

One tried and trusted method of administering the process is for the authority to delegate the detailed work to a cross-party sub-committee or other such body, and for that sub-committee to meet on a regular basis to consider all appropriate representations. At the end of the review process, the sub committee then makes its recommendations to a meeting of the full council for ratification, following which the polling districts and polling places are formally designated and come into being.

It is clearly for each relevant authority to decide how its wishes to administer the review process, but whichever method is used, the proceedings must be formally minuted in order to ensure transparency of the process.

10. Completion of the review

On completion of a review, the relevant authority is required to give reasons for its decisions in respect of the designation of both polling districts and polling places (21) In addition, the authority must publish:

- all correspondence sent to a Returning Officer in connection with the review, and
- all correspondence sent to any person whom the authority thinks has particular expertise in relation to access to premises or facilities for persons who have different forms of disability;
- all representations made by any person in connection with the review;
- the minutes of any meetings held by the authority where details of the review have been considered;
- details of the actual designations of polling districts and polling places agreed as a result of the review; and
- details of where the results of the review have been published (22).

Schedule A1 does not specify in what manner the relevant authority is required to publish this notice, but it would seem reasonable to follow the principles set out in the Review of Polling Districts and Polling Places (Parliamentary Elections) Regulations 2006 for the publication of a Returning Officer’s representations.

11. The role of the Electoral Commission

The Electoral Commission has no role in the review process itself. However, the Commission has an extremely important role in respect of considering representations and observations made that a relevant authority has not conducted a review so as to:
11.1 Who may make representation to the Electoral Commission?

Section 18D (1) of the Representation of the People Act 1983 sets out who may make representations to the Electoral Commission, namely:

- in England, any parish council which is wholly or partly situated within the constituency (or parish meeting where there is no such council);
- in Wales, any community council which is wholly or partly situated within the constituency;
- not less than thirty registered electors in the constituency (although electors registered anonymously cannot make such a representation (24)
- any person (except the Returning Officer) who made representations to the authority when the review was being undertaken; and
- any person who is not an elector in a constituency in the authority’s area who the Commission feels has sufficient interest in the accessibility of disabled persons to polling places in the area or has particular expertise in relation to the access to premises or facilities of disabled persons.

In addition, the Returning Officer may make observations on any representations made to the Commission (25).

11.2 Review by the Electoral Commission

The Electoral Commission is required to consider any such representations and observations, and after doing so, may direct the relevant authority to make any alterations it sees necessary to the polling places designated by the review (26).

Should an authority fail to make the alterations within two months of the direction being given, the Commission may make the alterations itself.

12. Non-compliance

It is important to note that the outcome of an election cannot be questioned simply because a relevant authority, an Electoral Registration Officer, a Returning Officer or the Electoral Commission fails to comply with any or all aspects of a review process (27).

13. Other accessibility issues to consider

13.1 Polling stations

As detailed above, it is the responsibility of the Returning Officer to provide a sufficient number of polling stations within the polling places designated by the relevant authority, and to allot the electors to those polling stations in such manner as he or she thinks the most convenient (28).

However, in complying with this requirement, the Returning Officer should have regard to the accessibility needs of all voters. In this respect, accessibility not only means entering and moving around a polling station, but also the facilities available to assist electors in casting their votes. Unless there are extenuating circumstances that make it impractical to do so, the polling places designated by relevant authorities should be accessible to all voters.

However, prior to an election being held, the Returning Officer should ensure that there is level access to both the polling place and the polling station(s), and where there is not, suitable adaptations, such as suitable temporary ramping are available.

13.2 Assistance to voters

Within the polling station, the Returning Officer is required to provide a number of facilities specifically designed to assist voters. The most important of these is the staff, who should be fully trained in their roles and responsibilities, and understand what facilities must be provided.

In summary, at least one copy of the following must be provided inside the polling station (29).

- directions for the guidance of voters;
- enlarged version of the ballot paper for the assistance of partially-sighted voters;
- device to enable blind and partially-sighted voters to vote unaided, i.e. a Braille template;
- inside every voting compartment, “vote for one candidate only …” or “vote for no more than X candidates” notices, as appropriate;
- hand-held copy of the enlarged ballot paper for the assistance of partially-sighted voters (30).

In addition, a copy of the directions for the guidance of voters must be displayed outside the polling station.

13.3 Translations

The Returning Officer is now authorised to make available in alternative formats any document published in connection with an election as he or she thinks appropriate, except nomination papers and the ballot papers (31).

This means that the Returning Officer may, in addition to the copies above, make the polling station notices available in:

- Braille;
- languages other than English;
- graphical representations;
- other means of making the information accessible to persons who might otherwise have reasonable access, e.g. audio.

13.4 Other assistance

Presiding Officers may (in the presence of any polling agents present) assist voters who are incapacitated by blindness or other disability. Similarly, a blind or disabled voter may be assisted by a companion, who must either be directly related to them, or be entitled themselves to vote at that election.

Where the Presiding Officer assists a voter, the appropriate details must be entered on the “list of votes marked by the presiding officer”. Where a companion assists a voter, the companion must complete a “declaration made by the companion of a voter with disabilities”.

13.5 Accessibility checklist

It is good practice for the Returning Officer to check that every polling station is, and remains, accessible throughout polling day, and is set up correctly. An example of a basic check list is attached, which identifies the issues that should as a minimum be considered.

Example of a polling station accessibility checklist

Polling station number: PO Inspector:

1) Office
   Have you telephoned the control room to confirm that your premises are ready to open?

2) Entrance, exit and approaches
   (i) Is the approach signage clear and are electors able to easily identify where the polling station is?
   (ii) Is the entrance clearly signposted and free from obstructions?
   (iii) If a temporary ramp has been supplied, is it secure?
   (iv) Where no temporary ramp has been supplied, is there level access to the building?
   (v) Have you ensured good signage for any alternative disabled access, and can somebody in a wheelchair read them?
   (vi) Is the door for any separate disabled access open?
   (vii) Have double doors been checked to ensure good access for all?
   (viii) Are there parking spaces reserved for disabled people and are the spaces close to the polling station entrance?

3) Notices correctly displayed
   (a) Inside the polling station
      (i) Is the ‘guidance for voters’ notice clearly displayed?
      (ii) Is the large-print ballot paper clearly visible for all voters?
      (iii) Is there a ‘vote for one candidate only’ notice in each polling booth?
      (iv) Is the ‘Apply here for ballot papers’ notice displayed?
      (v) Is the street list clearly visible (where appropriate)?
   (b) Outside the polling station
      (i) Is the ‘guidance for voters’ notice clearly displayed?

4) Inside the polling station
   (i) Is the polling station set up to make best use of space?
   (ii) Is best use being made of the lights and natural light available?
   (iii) Is the Braille ‘selector’ template readily available?
   (iv) Is the hand-held enlarged version of the ballot paper readily available?

5) Polling booths
   (i) Are they correctly erected and in such a position so as to make best use of the lights and natural light?
   (ii) Is the low-level polling booth properly erected and easily accessible?
   (iii) Can the PO and PCs observe them clearly?
   (iv) Are the pencils in each booth sharpened and available for use?
   (v) Is the string attached to the pencils long enough for the size of ballot paper and to accommodate both right and left handed voters?

6) Ballot box
   (i) Is it placed immediately adjacent to the PO?
(ii) Is it correctly sealed?
(iii) Can a wheelchair user gain easy access to the top of the ballot box?

7) Staffing matters
   (i) Have appointment forms been collected and placed in the envelope?
   (ii) Are the staff smartly dressed?

8) Tellers
   (i) Are tellers unable to see or hear what is going on in the polling station?
   (ii) Is the ‘guidance for tellers’ notice clearly displayed in the tellers’ area?
Appendix C

Extract from the Representation of the People Act 1983 (as inserted by Section 16 of the Electoral Administration Act 2006)

18A Polling districts at parliamentary elections

(1) Every constituency is to be divided into polling districts.
(2) A relevant authority must—
   (a) divide its area into polling districts for the purpose of parliamentary elections for so much of any constituency as is situated in its area, and
   (b) keep the polling districts under review.
(3) The following rules apply—
   (a) the authority must seek to ensure that all electors in a constituency in its area have such reasonable facilities for voting as are practicable in the circumstances;
   (b) in England, each parish is to be a separate polling district;
   (c) in Wales, each community is to be a separate polling district;
   (d) in Scotland, each electoral ward (within the meaning of section 1 of the Local Governance (Scotland) Act 2004) is to be divided into two or more separate polling districts.
(4) Subsection (3) (b) to (d) does not apply if, in any case, there are special circumstances.
(5) If an alteration of polling districts in an area is made under this section—
   (a) the registration officer who acts for the area must make such adaptations of his register of parliamentary electors as are necessary to take account of the alteration, and
   (b) the alteration is effective on the date on which the registration officer publishes a notice stating that the adaptations have been made by him.

18B Polling places at parliamentary elections

(1) A polling place is to be designated for each polling district in a constituency.
(2) But subsection (1) does not apply if the size or other circumstances of a polling district are such that the situation of the polling stations does not materially affect the convenience of the electors or any body of them.
(3) A relevant authority must—
   (a) designate the polling places for the polling districts in its area, and
   (b) keep the polling places in its area under review.
(4) The following rules apply—
   (a) the authority must seek to ensure that all electors in a constituency in its area have such reasonable facilities for voting as are practicable in the circumstances;
   (b) the authority must seek to ensure that so far as is reasonable and practicable every polling place for which it is responsible is accessible to electors who are disabled;
   (c) the authority must have regard to the accessibility to disabled persons of potential polling stations in any place which it is considering designating as a polling place or the designation of which as a polling place it is reviewing;
   (d) the polling place for a polling district must be an area in the district, unless special circumstances make it desirable to designate an area wholly or partly outside the district;
   (e) the polling place for a polling district must be small enough to indicate to electors in different parts of the district how they will be able to reach the polling station.
(5) If no polling place is designated for a polling district the polling district is to be taken to be the polling place.
18C  Review of polling districts and places

(1) Each relevant authority must complete a review under sections 18A and 18B of all of the polling districts and polling places in its area before the end of the period of 12 months starting with the date on which section 16 of the Electoral Administration Act 2006 comes into force.

(2) Subsection (1) does not apply in the case of a polling district or polling place (as the case may be) which is designated for the first time during that period.

(3) In such a case, the first review of the polling district or polling place must be completed before the end of the period of four years starting with the date on which that designation is made.

(4) The authority must complete a further review of each polling district and polling place in its area before the end of the period of four years starting with the completion of the previous such review.

(5) Subsections (1) to (4) do not prevent a relevant authority carrying out at any time a review of a particular polling district or polling place.

(6) Schedule A1 has effect in relation to a review.

18D  Review of polling districts and places: representations to Electoral Commission

(1) This section applies if in relation to a constituency in the area of a relevant authority a relevant representation is made to the Electoral Commission by—

(a) an interested authority in England and Wales;

(b) not less than 30 electors in the constituency;

(c) a person (other than the returning officer) who has made representations under Schedule A1;

(d) a person who is not an elector in a constituency in the authority's area but who the Commission think has sufficient interest in the accessibility of disabled persons to polling places in the area or has particular expertise in relation to the access to premises or facilities of disabled persons.

(2) A relevant representation is a representation that a review under section 18A or 18B has not been conducted by a relevant authority so as to—
